NINA SLEJKO BLOM:

THE POSSIBILITY OF AN IMAGE

One image, physically/digitally untouched is altered through circumstances, like a person through life. Or an image sliced and divided, toyed with. Another image imitates a sculpture by Ugo Rondinone - it is easier to colour an image at home than boulders in a desert; and while not as striking, the photo similarly transmits depth of thought.

When working digitally, I often use images taken with my mobile phone, and repurpose private images that have been badly aimed or poorly focused or those taken in low resolution.

I work with limitations and possibilities of gadgets, spaces, settings, of digital and physical circumstances.

Vem kommer höra ett träd falla när alla gudarna är döda - fotoinstallation med QR kod och facebook-sida

Urskogarna försvinner i snabb takt världen över. Så pass mycket så att syreproduktionen är hotad.

Vi tror på vetenskapen, vi värdesätter förnuftet och den ständiga utvecklingen. Så vi har inte tid att titta på träd, eller konst. Vi kan knappt finna tid att rädda dem eller förstå dem.

Vi tänker pragmatiskt.

Det finns ingen tid för spirituell nonsens.

Tron på andliga väsen försvinner. Tron på en blond super-ras är på väg tillbaka.

24/7 - för upptagna för att andas, blandar vi samman andlighet med kommersialiserad yoga - handbryggt filterkaffe - sticka-din-egen-halsduk-retreats, etc.

Vem vill höra ett träd falla?

Who will hear a tree fall when all the gods are dead?

Whether online or in the flesh, nature or city, networks sustain the ego and self esteem, nourishing forests of individualism.

Who cares if anyone hears a tree fall? Philosophy's an antiquity, the domain of loners and outcasts unplugged from social media.

Mycelium, that web of life, keeps us connected.

"I eat only white foods: eggs, sugar, grated bones, the fat of dead animals; veal, salt, coconut, chicken cooked in white water; fruit mold, rice, turnips; camphorated sausage, dough, cheese (white), cotton salad, and certain fish (skinless)." Quoted by Rollo H. Myers (1968). Erik Satie, p.135. New York: Dover.

Satie mentions to his friends that for achieving whiteness in his work, he gets himself into the right mood by eating nothing but "white" foods. By eating white food, if only for a week, Slejko is preparing for the new piece - Alphonse Allais' Souvenir Shop.
